Invitation to become a Member of the International Commission on Water Quality

The International Commission on Water Quality (ICWQ) under the International Association of Hydrological Sciences was created to promote the advancement of water quality science, including assessment, modelling and management. This goal is accomplished informally through communications among interested members/participants, and through organized knowledge transfer activities such as workshops on topical issues and symposia at which scientists present their results in oral and poster sessions and in accompanying publications. More information about ICWQ can be found at: www.geos.ed.ac.uk/icwq

As you are working in the field of water quality, I wish to invite you to become, free of charge, a Member of the International Commission on Water Quality.

ICWQ is increasing its level of activity to include the organisation of regional workshops and training activities. Our vision is to organise regional workshops in every continent of the world over the next few years which will focus on the specific water quality problems in that region.

It is important that you become a Member of ICWQ in order to influence this contemporary movement, receive information about these new developments and to participate in a global network of water quality scientists. Please note that membership is FREE of charge. To become a member, please send an email to the ICWQ Secretary, Dr Wouter Buytaert (w.buytaert@imperial.ac.uk) and ICWQ President Valentina Krysanova: (krysanova@pik-potsdam.de). Please enclose a short CV (max 1 page) describing your research interests and activities.

We are looking forward to hearing from you.

ICWQ President

Dr. Valentina Krysanova
